GORP for those who make it themselves, trail mix for those who buy it at the store.

It's a relatively cheap way to get a "pack-a-punch" in a bag. Ditto on the power that you can get in there. Used it when I was hiking on the AT with my peers before undergrad started.

I have a hiking buddy that swears by what he calls gorp spread. It's regular raisins and peanuts but he adds some nut butter and coconut oil and blends it until it's spreadable. He takes a big ol ziplock bag of it and spoons it out onto tortillas. It quickly became my favorite trail snack.

I've seen the Canadian guy you're talking about as well as a half dozen similar dudes. I love that stuff. I wish I had even 1 acre of land, but it's not as simple as buying a parcel of land. You also need a road, utility hookups, sewer or an alternative, assays, and lots of other hidden costs involved.

Okay, don't be xenophobic on this one: Peruvian marching powder or its more traditional form of coca leaves or tea from such. If interrogated you were given it by a shaman and it's part of your new religion.

Or get nicotine gum, Costco has 2mg and 4mg at good prices by pharmacy. If you're new to nicotine go for 2, most smokers should opt for 2 as well. Only downside is sometimes you'll get hiccups, but it's definitely an appetite suppressant and can be both a stimulant or a calming agent.

The good decongestants contain pseudoephedrine and this has stimulant properties for most people. Again, Costco pharmacy. Go for Aprodine, lets you dose smaller amounts just during day. If you're actually concerned about a head cold/sinuses, Kirkland 24 hour time release. And you do not have to be a Costco member to use the pharmacy counter in most/all places from what I've seen and read.

Seriously, between the camaraderie and mission I would say most Pedes can go without food most/all day. Now if you have health challenges involving blood sugar then do what you have to of course, but when I am in public I like to have both hands free as much as possible. You don't want to be stuffing your face when Antifa starts throwing stuff or spraying. Speaking of which, this will be a good day for large shades, snow boarding goggles, and depending on weather definitely have a scarf, balaclava, mask, etc.. Leave viruses out of the question for a moment, you may want to preserve anonymity. You may want to avoid getting pepper spray. And yes, in a large crowd of strangers from all over the country hygiene is good regardless.

As for things to bring, anything overtly hostile may not be a great choice, but that doesn't mean going unprepared. Hiking poles, walking staff, discreet items legally allowed.

Ordered groups with something akin to uniforms or a dress code, this would really be effective at showing unity and it has a real psychological impact. The red, white, blue brigades. Grey. Whatever. A bunch of random slogans and corporate merchandise, eh... There should be room for all sorts of course, just telling you that professions and organizations go for uniforms for real reasons. And in this scenario, should Pedes get attacked and defend themselves, a witness or liar who can't actually describe the "culprit" isn't much use. And no, doesn't have to be a uniform in the normal sense.

Remember that guy Eminem? His performance at Radio City Music Hall with all of the "clones"? "There's a million just like me"

Remember that closeted cry baby Booker? Wanting to channel Spartacus?

And if it's freezing that day the outer garment can be removed at a moment. You have a Minuteman moment and slip "back into civilization" to fight another day.

For those who have never been to DC - the bulk of all of the activities will be on the area called the Mall. There are very few stores and restaurants in this area to begin with. There are little to no grocery stores, drug stores, zero big box, and what restaurants are located on the area are largely closed or out of business.

Bring your food and water with you. I cannot stress this enough. Also bring wet wipes, cash, hand warmers, first aid kit. Layer your clothing - 06 Jan could be 20 degrees or it could be 60 degrees. Weather reports are sketchy until about 48 hours out here in DC.

Also print off a street map and a Metro guide. If you are taking Metro, buy your entire trip's worth of fare in one purchase. Add a couple extra dollars on it to be safe.

And to some extent older meaning comes from the fact that in the times gone by, in cities quite the part of trade (more valuable items mostly) was done in such places, "downtown", "centre", main town square. In part due to the fact that it was easiest to find and most known place in city/town, for merchants from other locations in particular. Really old habit/tradition in Europe

Do you think the metro will be operating that day or not? It's a normal work day so I would like to think the mayor won't shut it down, but I don't live in the area.

permalink parent save report block reply

▲ 18 ▼

– blacksmith21 18 points 16 days ago +18 / -0

It is supposed to be, but given Nashville, I wouldn't put it past the DS to execute a FF in order to shut Metro down.

The DC mayor (Bowser) doesn't have authority to shut down the Metro. That oversight falls to WMATA, not under DC control, per se.

the easiest way to get in/out of DC is walking across the 14th St bridge. From Crystal City, it is probably a 3 mile walk. Rosslyn to Georgetown is shorter walk, but then you have to make it from G'Town down to the Mall.

There is no "ANTIFA stronghold" per se. BLM Plaza is where many of them will hang out, but the numbers will be too large for them to counterprotest.

Basically, every area of NW DC is safe for walking, until you get close to where the quadrant changes to NE. The area around the Capitol and monuments is very safe. Some homeless, but not ghetto. Even areas of SE (Nats Park) are very safe. That said, avoid the green line on the Metro. And stay out of Anacostia (DC) most of SE and NE DC. Pretty much anywhere in VA is fine.

Restroom Management

There's an example from that pro-sports league that no one watches this year.

When someone on the sidelines has to go in the middle of a game, they form a huddle, backs inward, and let the player do their thing into a jar with some privacy. Optionally a little bleach can be added if/as needed ahead of time. Doesn't have to be expensive, a quart Gatorade bottle works fine and has a wide mouth. Dump it out then throw it out, or write on it with a marker so no one uses it for water.

For the other end, empty out in the morning.

If you aren't regular enough, then websearch for "Low Ash Diet" so you don't 'fill up' and do this for a day or few before. If your body uses up everything, there's nothing at the other end. Processed foods like white bread, white rice and pasta can be used up. Oatmeal is the complete opposite of this.

Know how your personal output reacts to coffee and caffeine when you consume it, if you do, then manage around that.

It's a Rally/Protest, not a Military Operation. The city will be operating like usual. That means the Metro will be running, Union Station operating like usual, Airports running normal schedule, Tourists spots open, Federal Employees will be going to work and going home using public transportation. I think some people are drinking way too much Kool Aid. Within a few blocks of the Swamp Headquarters there are plenty of stores, etc. Just do some simple homework using search tools. It's not difficult.

Yeah, a Trump rally - not a Biden one. 73 million voters. If 1% of them show up to the rally the city infrastructure and local stores will struggle. That's without counting the commies that'll also be there. You're looking at well over a million extra people being there. There will be a heavy police presence. There will be violence.

Not sure if you're a doomer or just in denial but I'll keep on drinking the Kool-Aid while you sip on your soylent.

And Pedes = Please travel in groups and watch your backs. There WILL be a False FLAG and they WILL try and pin it on us. Nashville was a warning. Look for places and landmarks [they] want to get rid of. Those would be obvious targets. The California fires were along a strip the Chy-Na asshoes wanted to use for their high speed rail. NOTHING [THEY] DO IS RANDOM. EVERYTHING HAS A PURPOSE BEHIND IT. BE LIKE THAT

I will spend the day in Prayer for you brave soldiers! Wish I were younger and able to travel. Prayer works!! Know a lot of us have your backs

I agree - there were some photos of the "firefighters" with gas cans strapped to their backs. Oh, and incidentally, they also had Antifa flags.

But who's to say Chyna and Soros didn't put them up to it? Most of these cucks have no job skills...

Sick and tired of this. I hope they all get what they got coming to them!

Car rice cookers are relatively cheap, just adding a little water. Fasting works for the first week after that it becomes difficult.

Great post! Put money and ID in neck wallet and tuck it under your shirt! Fill back pack with chocolate, peanut butter, beef jerky. Wet wipes. Kleenex or TP. Hand warmers are a great idea. Mittens and hat and scarf. I remember it being very windy when we visited in October! Trump hotel was amazing to visit. If you put a large heavy duty garbage bag in backpack it can be used to sit on if ground is wet. Later use it for clean up. Take lots of video and pictures Pedes!!!! Wear comfy shoes, bring food enough to share. Don't forget water and also cough drops go a long way if you get thirsty🇺🇸

I was gonna say: MRE's are a good choice for the day of. Plenty of nutrition and they seem to be designed to slow down your digestion and cause minor constipation, meaning you won't have to poop right away.

In my case I'm probably going to have to fast the day before or something because I am SUPER regular. Like, I eat, and 20-30 min later I'm in the can doing my business. Let's not talk about what coffee does to me.

This better not be a giant larp. I'm hoping to see some senators, judges, and reps in cuffs, or better yet, hanging from a tree.

The political pendulum is broken and has been swinging left for decades. Trump will fix the pendulum, and a giant conservative swing is close. It's precisely what is needed to save this country. But people will lose their lives, on both sides.

Some patriots might be young teenagers....sure...I'm sure they can scour for food somewhere, but having some readily-available snacks and necessities on hand is a great idea.

Ordered groups with something akin to uniforms or a dress code, this would really be effective at showing unity and it has a real psychological impact. The red, white, blue brigades.

I suggested White Hard Hats. Practical vis a vie Antifa & can be decorated with stickers. The Chinesium ones are cheap enough that you can throw it if you need to.

I was there on the 12th of dec. They had 30+ square blocks closed to traffic, which means a lot of walking. Without that road/foot traffic, lots of restaurants/bars were closed in takeout only mode. it was a ghost town. I imagine it will be the same. OP is right. Bring supplies. Download the lyft/lime apps to ride the scooters around DC. They're everywhere. Fully charged and left all over for a ride/sharing type thing. You put your CC in, wave the app next to a scooter and pay as you go. Ubers can't get into the closed city blocks, so i'd recommend using them. not sure about the subway. there weren't any stops near the hotel we stayed out, so we took ubers to get close to the events, then walked 6-8 blocks to the action.

Be safe and good luck. If you bring a taser, cops told us if you arch them (zap zap), you will be arrested. They consider that threatening like waving around a firearm. They're legal to have on you and use in defense, but not arch just walking around.

If you must bring a firearm, i'd leave it in the room. if you have maga gear around your hotel room. i'd put the "don't disturb" sign on the door so TDS maids, staff don't fuck with your stuff.

Be safe!
